

HINDENBURG IN DRIVE TO CROSS DVINA

ADVANCE OF GERMAN FORCES NORTH OF WARSAW RESTS UPON CRAFTY FIELD MARSHAL.

BALKAN CRISIS IS NEAR

National Assemblies of Greece and Serbia Seek to Settle Territorial Demands of Bulgaria.

London, Aug. 15.—Military operations in the eastern field are developing slowly. Both sides show the effects of the intensity of the Warsaw struggle. The German advance centers on the efforts of Field Marshal Von Hindenburg to force troops across the Dvina and eastward in the general direction of Petrograd and the near approach of the army of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, to the new Breslau-Litovsk defense. Notwithstanding the steady pressure of the Germans, the Russians have succeeded thus far in holding them west of the Dvina.

Balkan Crisis at Climax.
The Balkan crisis is drawing to a climax. The national assemblies of Serbia and Greece met today with the probability of a definite decision as regards Bulgaria's territorial demands upon which hinges the question of united action of the Balkan states with the allies.

In the best posted quarters here, the outlook is regarded with a degree of pessimism. It is expected that Serbia will seek a compromise and Greece will reject the Bulgarian contentions. Reports from Athens indicate that King Constantine is insisting the new cabinet must maintain strict neutrality, the effect of which would be to withhold from Greece from participating in a plan of United Balkan cooperation with the allies.

German acts to South. In the meantime there are many evidences of Austro-German preparations to deal with the Balkan situation. According to information from Bukarest, German army corps have been concentrated near the junction of Hungary, Rouman and Serbia. This with the bombardment of Belgrade and the activity of Austrian artillery at various points along the Danube, lends support to reports of a great Austro-German offensive in the Balkans. The outcome of the crisis is awaited most anxiously as determining whether the allies will receive new support from the Balkans and whether Germany's supplies of ammunition for Turkey will continue to be shut off by the Balkan barrier.

May Reach Constantinople. Bulgarian officials do not expect an agreement will be reached but the Serbian minister at London, M. Boshkovitch, told the Associated Press he believed a middle ground would be found on which it would be possible to unite the Balkan states.

Two Towns Occupied.
Berlin, Aug. 15.—Field Marshal Von Mackensen, continuing his pursuit of the retreating Russians from the south toward Breslau-Litovsk, has occupied Glat and Slavaytze, according to an official announcement today. The army of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, pressing the Russians from the west, has occupied Loysee and Miodzyrzec, the statement adds.

Comprehensive plans for the improvement of the aeronautic branch of the war department as part of the general scheme of national defense are being prepared by the signal corps under the direction of Brig. Gen. George P. Scriven and Lieut. Col. Samuel Reber.

Col. Reber has just returned from the Pacific coast, where he went as member of a commission authorized by congress to report upon available locations for an aviation school for extension of this branch of the service. It is said that trips will soon be made to seek location on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

Col. Reber says that San Diego, San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane were visited, and various sites well looked over. There is need of more aviators for army work; the machines can be turned out whenever necessary. To furnish pilots in event of war is the difficulty.

NOTED HORSEMAN IS SUMMONED BY DEATH

B. C. Kimlin Passed Away Shortly After Noon Today at Daughter's Home on Main Street.

Benjamin Courtney Kimlin, famous the country over as a race horse owner and trainer, died at 12:30 today at his home, at 211 South Main street, following an illness of some length. Mr. Kimlin was sixty years of age and for the last thirty years of his life he has been interested in breeding and training race horses, until taken ill over a year ago.

He was born in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., on July 9, 1855, and within recent years moved to Illinois, residing at Cherry Valley, a small village near Rockford. In July, a year ago, Mr. Kimlin came to make his home with his daughter and a few weeks ago was taken to Rochester, Minn., for an operation to stem the effects of a serious malady. The surgeons did not complete the operation because of the acuteness of the disease and he was returned home two weeks ago. His condition became worse and death came last night. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

Mr. Kimlin was a member of the Modern Woodmen and Tribe of Ben Hur at Rockford and is widely known throughout the middle western states. High tribute is paid to him by local horsemen with whom he was associated during the last three years. Mr. Kimlin's stable of prize horses were trained at the Janesville track for the last three years and raced over the same circuit with Janesville is on. He owned Don Labor with a record of 2:05 1/4, and trained Ernest Axtell 2:08 3/4, the horse which broke the track record here a year ago. He also brought to the front of the horse world, Bird Gratton, 2:09 3/4, and Bertha C. 2:09 3/4.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at one o'clock from the home on South Main, the Rev. T. D. Williams officiating. The body will be taken in a private car over the interurban line to Cherry Valley, Ill., for interment.

FIRE HORSE "CASSEL" MAKES HIS LAST RUN

Veteran Horse Dies at End of Run to Pleasant Street at Noon Today. Storm Does Damage.

Cassel, the big black horse, stationed at number one station, made his last run today. Between twelve and one o'clock when the department received an alarm, Cassel responded to the bell and was prancing with eagerness to be at the scene. He was dropped down by his massive frame and was buckled with lightning speed. The alarm was at the tobacco shed of F. G. Freese, 1701 Pleasant street, and Cassel with the other horse drove through the blinding rain with their usual speed. Just as the driver shouted "whoa," at the finish of the run, the big black fell down and when the fireman reached the animal—he was dead. Cassel was the favorite of the department, being the oldest in the service. For eleven years Cassel has been in the fire department and was obtained when four years old. Some years ago Cassel was taken sick and a growth within the windpipe developed, which may have caused his quick death today. "Poor old Cassel was taken to the last," remarked Chief Klein.

The lightning which struck the shed, only did minor damage, being put out by the heavy rain and neighbors before the department arrived.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK BRIGHTER; OPINION AT DULUTH MEETING

Annual Convention of National Association of Mercantile Agencies in Session—Favorable Reports.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Duluth, Minn., Aug. 15.—Better business conditions—an actual exhilaration of business throughout the country measured by dollars and cents—is the outlook of delegates from all over the United States, who reached Duluth today to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Mercantile Agencies. They declared the business outlook is brighter than it has been for three years. Most of the delegates report good times at hand. This is particularly noticeable they say in the east where factories are on full shifts and running all time with augmented payrolls.

Sherman Rauch of the Credit Reporting company, Newark, N. J., was one of the enthusiasts.

"Of course many factories in the vicinity of Newark have busy manufacturing war goods," said Rauch, "makers of steel and iron products have been running twenty-four hours a day for months, but there is a noticeable recuperation in other lines also." To show how true we are from hard times, we raised $250,000 in three days recently to prepare for the 25th anniversary of the founding of Newark. This money was collected from merchants and manufacturers in the city.

Samuel Rosenfeld of the Commercial Agency of St. Louis, vice president of the Association, said business conditions were much improved in the south.

"We'd send to a great extent on the southern trade," said he. "The cotton tieup paralyzed the south for a while but the rest of the country came to the rescue nobly and steadily."

Wm. J. Starr of Boston said that such a splendid spirit of co-operation exists between the agencies that a subscriber is assured an accurate report on any individual or company in any city in the United States.

Starr is secretary and treasurer of the Retail Credit Men's Association in Boston, and will stay over for that convention which will open here Thursday. The majority of the agency men also are members of the other organizations and stay for the second convention.

ROBBED OF JEWELRY IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

They stunned the maid with a blackjack and intimidated Mrs. Allen with a revolver. The moment the robbers disappeared Mrs. Allen ran to a balcony and screamed. A nearby policeman heard the alarm and exchanged shots with the fugitives, but they escaped. The jewelry, Mrs. Allen said, included a pearl necklace valued at $9,800 and a 12 karat, diamond ring worth $7,000.

WAR LEADERS PROMISE AID TO CARRANZA

FEAR OF ARMED INTERVENTION BY PAN-AMERICAN POWERS SAID TO HAVE PROMPTED ACTION.

DELIVER PEACE APPEAL

Men in Carranza's Army Said to Be in Favor of Villa's Proposal For Truce—More Reports of Destitution.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Aug. 15.—General Carranza's agency here today made public telegrams from several generals pledging their support to General Carranza. The agency announced the telegrams were written at a time when the generals feared a threat of armed intervention by the United States in the internal affairs of Mexico and of participation in that movement by South and Central American powers.

A state department dispatch from Torreon says the Villa garrison at Durango has revolted, and that the city has been taken by Carranza forces.

Copies of Appeal Delivered.
Word that both Generals Carranza and Villa have received copies of the Pan-American appeal reached the state department today. From several sources it is ascertained that General Villa's suggestion of a truce has been favorably received by some subordinate officials and soldiers of the Carranza army. There has been virtually no fighting in Mexico for several days.

Assurances that General Carranza will not obstruct delivery of the Pan-American appeal to Mexico, reached the state department today in a message from C. E. Parker of the American embassy staff in Mexico City, saying General Gonzalez, Carranza's commander there, had promised safe conduct to the messengers who are to carry the appeal through General Zapata and others.

Americans Destitute.
Parker also reported destitution among Americans in the capital and said 120 were being aided by American embassy attaches and had asked to be sent to the United States. A message from Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz, reported that the bishop of Vera Cruz, who had been imprisoned by Carranza authorities for some time, had been released.

Advices from Monterey said Villa forces had advanced within nine leagues of the city.

Defers to Carranza.
El Paso, August 15.—The Carranza consulate here today announced the receipt of a cable from the reply of General P. B. Caines, Carranza's commander in Sonora, to the Pan-American appeal for a peace conference for Mexican leaders. In effect it refers the state department and the Latin American diplomats to Carranza.

Answer Given Out.
The communication states that General Caines has directed the following answer transmitted:

"Referring to your esteemed note of today in which by instruction of your government you transmit to me a note of August fourteenth signed by secretary of state of the United States and the ambassadors extraordinary and plenipotentiary of Argentina, Chile and Brazil, and the envoys extraordinary and plenipotentiary of Uruguay, Bolivia and Guatemala referring to matters and affairs in Mexico in due answer to which I would state that said note will be answered by the first chief of the constitutional army in charge of executive power of the nation, Venustiano Carranza, and that what the chief of the nation may decide will be upheld by the entire constitutional army and the Mexican people."

U. S. Cavalrymen Fired Upon.
Brownsville, Texas, August 15.—A detachment of United States cavalry patrol was fired on last night from the Mexican side of the Rio Grande near Mercedes about thirty miles up the Rio Grande from here. The firing occurred at Progresso. The cavalrymen returned the fire and the shooting from the Mexican side stopped. There were no casualties among the troops.

Reports of renewed attempts by Mexican bandits to reorganize their bands in the lower Rio Grande valley were brought here today by captain of Texas Rangers, J. J. Sanders.

Pullers In

In the old days along the Bowers storekeepers had what were known as "pullers in," who grabbed passers by and endeavored to sell them by main strength. Happily this style of merchandising is more—but it is left behind the germ of an idea. This idea is that an attractive store front and an interesting window attract customers. Today everyone reads the newspapers and alert storekeepers put to the front in their windows the goods which manufacturers are advertising in the newspapers. These goods are in the public mind. Their presence in the store window attracts attention and they bring people inside to look and buy.

EXAMINATION SHOWS SPEED CAR DRIVER'S INJURY NOT SERIOUS

Autolast Who Went Through Fence at Track Resting Easily Today at Hospital.

No serious results are anticipated from the injury of Edward Grey, racing driver, who plunked through the fence at the lower turn at the fair grounds Saturday afternoon, and his condition was improved this morning. Grey's face is badly lacerated and his shoulders bruised where he was struck by the wire fence, when his big yellow machine, the Buick Bullet, cut through the woven wire. An examination made by the attending physician, Dr. Wayne Munn, failed to reveal any broken bones or internal injuries as were feared, when Grey was hurried to the hospital Saturday, bleeding freely from the mouth and nose.

One report of the accident is that Grey swerved too close to the embankment when a woman started to cross the track the driver taking a close chance of going around the curve on the outside, rather than hit the woman. His mechanician, however, believed the accident due to Grey's inability to see the fence and the danger because of the heavy dust that was raised by the machines, because he did not see the woman from his side of the racing car. The big racer dashed over the short embankment, through the fence, tearing down a stretch of twenty feet, bounding over the wire where it turned over. The mechanician was thrown from the car to the field, unhurt, and Grey was found unconscious some distance from his car. There was an immense crowd gathered around the turn and the other racing cars were flagged down to prevent another accident, for the police were unable to cope with the situation for a short time.

Grey was taken to the hospital in an automobile, where he will remain for several days more. The racing car was not damaged to any great extent.

The auto races failed to develop the interest of the fair crowd because of the slow time and lack of entries. The first race scheduled was for twenty-five miles and it was on the first lap that Grey met with his accident. In an attempt to obtain a flying start, the field of seven cars being paced by J. A. Strimble, the machine called a wheel spin. The cause the cars behind went across the starting line ahead of the first four machines.

A. J. Parcellle with his little white Buick, won the twenty-five mile race at a speed less than sixty miles per hour. A big blue car, driven by Wondelick of Bloomington, Ill., took a commanding lead, and held to the front until the twelfth lap, when the mile track connecting road broke and eliminated the car. Parcellle went in to the lead and never was headed. Harry Williams of this city was his mechanic.

D. F. Nicolazzo of Milwaukee, driving a little Chevrolet, took the cup for the ten mile race over a field of three entrants, and Fred H. Eddy was second. Nicolazzo took the second in the first race. In both races the drivers feared to open their cars up on the curves and traveled about fifty miles per hour the stretches. Anyone could have seen a more exciting and even faster race on Milwaukee avenue, Thursday or Friday, when the auto drivers were racing to carry passengers to the grounds.

MOTHER FINDS GIRL ON ADVENTURE HERE

Rose Schmidt, Alias Rose Miller, on Way Home from Joliet, Put Up at Local Hotel During Fair.

Rose Miller and sister are the names on the register in one of the local hotels of two pretty young girls who arrived in the city Thursday night, Friday morning a woman came into the hotel and presented two photos of the same girl, to the clerk, and asked if Rose Schmidt was staying there. No Rose Schmidt had registered, but it was soon discovered that Rose Miller was the girl, for which Mrs. Schmidt, mother of the girl, and she was accompanied by the sheriff and the girl's sister.

When Rose was found in her room, with her companion, the latter refusing to give any name, she was told the following story:

"I wanted a vacation, so left Milwaukee August fifth and went to Joliet, where I stayed with relatives until coming here, and was on my way home."

Upon arriving here, Miss Schmidt joined a troupe of actors at the fair grounds, but she stayed in the east, because they would not pay her. From here she wired home for money, and in this way gave her mother a hard time. She had sold most of her clothing to her friend and did not have sufficient funds to return to her home. Her companion paid her own hotel bill and seemed independent of Miss Schmidt, refusing to give up the clothes she had bought from Rose, upon the demand of the mother.

"Mother Heart Broken."

"We have a nice home, and Rose has always had all she wants, and a fine piano," said the parent. "Her brother, who is four years younger than she, is to be married soon and he is ashamed of his sister and says he will not let her stand up for him at his wedding. Rose has never had to work and I do not see why she has done this. I may be that she had secured money from different men and had gotten along in this way. She said that she would leave again soon if the opportunity presented itself, and follow the show, which she had left. Her companion left for Chicago Saturday, where she will join the troupe again."

CHICAGO BOYS ON WAY TO CLEAR LAKE FARM PASS THROUGH CITY

A special car containing thirty Chicago youngsters bound for Rev. Jen. Lloyd Jones' Clear Lake annex near Milton Junction, passed through Janesville this morning over the C. At the depot here they delighted in seeing how much noise they could make, all the while a light of a big platoon of travelers.

The End of It All.

Measuring things by dollars, by hours, by pounds and yardsticks, measures everything accurately enough except the one thing we wish to measure, which is a man's soul. We are producing the material things of life faster, more cheaply, more shoddily, but it is open to question whether we are producing happier men and women, and that is what we are striving to do at the end of it all.

"Yaas," said Uncle Silas, "my son Bill hez got back from a special course he's been takin' at college, with a piece o' paper signed by th' 'thorities' sayin' as how he's an A. M. I dunno what an A. M. is, but I'm afeardy they's some mistake about it, for judgin' from the time he gits down to breakfast he behaves more like a P. M. ter me."

A Trying Ordeal.

"Colonel," asked the beautiful girl, "when was the most trying moment of your life?" "It was when I went to my wife's father for the purpose of asking him to let me have her. He was very deaf, and I had to explain the matter before twenty clerks!"—Answers.

Wild Kurd Girl Russian Masdot.

Hadzhina, a wild little six-year-old Kurdish girl, has become the mascot of a Russian artillery regiment operating on the Persian frontier. She was left behind when the population of the Armenian village of Hazer fled and Russian soldiers found her, clad in a filthy shirt, hiding in the depths of a bake oven.

After she had recovered from fright under the kind treatment of her captors, the little one told through an interpreter how she had been left behind by her mother, who escaped, taking with her another child. Her father, she said, was a soldier, and had been taken prisoner by the Russian troops.

HISTORY MADE BY THE INDIAN

Real Life Story of the Red Man Has Not Been Properly Set Forth
by White Writers.It has been pointed out more than once that if one could but "get at the facts" of the history of the Indian tribes it would be of interest to compare these with what is related as the fortune of most civilized nations. It is only in tradition that the history of the Indian lives, and only one version of the story is ever heard. Sometimes this is so true to nature that no room for doubt can be found. Such is the following chapter from the annals of the Beavers, a Canadian tribe:One day a young chief shot his arrow through a dog belonging to another brave. The brave revenged the death of his dog, and instantly a hundred bows were drawn. Before night had fallen some eighty lay dead around the camp, the pine woods rang with the lamentations of the women;
the tribe had lost its bravest men.There was a temporary truce. The friends of the chief whose arrow had killed the dog yet numbered some sixty people, and it was agreed that they should separate from the tribe and seek their fortune in the vast wilderness lying to the south.In the night they began their march.
Suddenly their brethren saw them depart, never to return. They went their way to the shores of the Lesser Slave lake, toward the great plains
which were said to be far southward,
by the banks of the swift-rolling Saskatchewan.The tribe of the Beavers never saw this exiled band again, but a hundred years later a Beaver Indian, who followed the fortunes of a white fur-hunter, found himself in one of the forts of the Saskatchewan. Strange Indians were camped about the palisades; they were members of the great Blackfoot tribe, whose hunting grounds lay south of the Saskatchewan. Among them were a few braves who, when they conversed, spoke a language different from that of the others, and in this language the Beaver Indian recognized his own tongue.Unselfish.

NEED TO BE HUMBLE.
IF WAR BRINGS GAINAMERICA IN DANGER OF VIOLAT-ING THE TENTH COMMAN-DMENT, SAYS REV. EW-ING.

SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

Overcome Selfishness and Secure Happiness Through the Joy of Service, Declares Speaker at Union Service.America as a nation is in danger of being guilty of the sin of covetousness, if it has not already transgressed in that respect, according to Reverend C. E. Ewing, the Congregational church, who was the speaker last evening at the union service at the Carroll M. E. church.Covetousness, the speaker explained, was a matter of exploitation. People in the United States have been profiting from the trade which has come through war orders from the nations of Europe. The first depression in America following the outbreak of the war gradually gave way to an influx of orders for food and ammunition until the balance of trade was turned largely in favor of the United States with streams of gold pouring in from abroad instead of from this country into Europe."America ought to be humble in the face of this wealth which is acquired through the pain and suffering of war-torn Europe. It is not a time for rejoicing but a time for preparing to put to a high and noble use the prosperity which we have gained through our own seeking. We have no right to lift ourselves up by pushing others down."Reverend Ewing took as his text
the tenth commandment, "Thou shalt not covet." He explained that a study of the commandments revealed something deeper and richer than one supposed they contained. The commandment against covetousness, he said, pertained to inward spirit. It has to do with the attitude of a person. Cov-etousness amounts to selfishness."Among the various sides of the tenth commandment, which is covet-ousness and it rules out the exploiting of other people for our own benefit. It is something that the world has always done and what the world is doing in this present time, with its business and its growing wealth, perhaps more than ever before.""It includes the passion for gambling which is nothing more or less than exploiting other people for self profit. Very often the employer in his mad quest for wealth secures it at expense of his employees. He exploits others for his own aggrandizement.""But the simplest rule of the only person who is sometimes found guilty of exploiting others. The exploitation of women by men for their pleasure, has been and is yet a sin which the tenth commandment forbids. There is always the tendency of the exploitation of the weak by the strong. It is most noticeably seen in the character of the 'bully,' now an exception to the rule, but all the more conspicuous on account of it.""We have in America the tendency to pick on certain classes. It is a great natural tendency. We are able to exploit the immigrants for our own advantage and gain. We forget that our ancestors were immigrants and that this country was a haven for the immigrants of the past, and should remain so today. We are no better than they.""In addition to the exploitation of other people, there is also the exploitation of the property of others. The competitive system of this country is one example of that form of exploitation. There will doubtless come a time when competition will not be the ruling factor in American trade, but at present the ruling idea is to get the better of one's competitor. There is nothing illegal or unjust about it according to our laws, but at the same time it falls within the meaning of the sin of cov-etousness which the tenth commandment forbids. Business men of today are sorely tempted to boost his own business by detracting from his competitor's. It leads toward monopoly, which is the highest form of selfish accumulation of property.""The person who becomes possessed of the idea of acquiring money and wealth is finally led on and on untilhe comes to believe himself the center of life. He believes that he is the object of his own life. His whole quest is for personal happiness. He rakes the most distant lands and combs the depths of the sea for strange delicacies to tickle his palate, and he fills the rooms of his luxurious home with great art works and rare splendors
all for his own personal enjoyment.
He spends fortunes in quest of happiness and never finds it. He is doomed to disappointment."On the other side, the positive side of this commandment, we find unselfishness, love in service. The selfish person exploits the world for his own benefit, the unselfish person exploits himself and his wealth for the benefit of others. That is the Christian standard as exemplified in the life of Christ himself. It is the only road to happiness. We forget self in our seeking to make others better, happier and more contented. We give our time, our money and ourselves to the work and secure happiness for ourselves as a reward."

READY FOR BIG MEETING

Salt Lake City, Utah, Aug. 16.—
Quite an array of legal talent, as the courtroom phrase has it, confronted Salt Lake City today, with distinguished attorneys from all parts of the United States here and on the way here for the annual convention of the American Bar Association.
Among those on the program during the three-days session are William Howard Taft, Joseph W. Bailey, and Supreme Justice Van Devanter.
In connection with the convention
a conference of commissioners on uniform laws was held last week, the final meeting being today. Subjects discussed included the need for uniform state laws on incorporations, regulating automobiles, limited partnership, land titles, conveyances, wills and extradition of the insane.
The American Institute of CriminalLaw and Criminology held its sessions today, President Robert Ralston of Pennsylvania presiding. Among the subjects considered were employment and compensation of prisoners, insurance and criminal responsibility, judicial probation and suspended sentences, classification and definition of crimes, indeterminate sentences, paroles, pardons, crime's relation to immigration, sterilization of criminals, and statistics.Among the features of entertainment provided are a concert at the Tabernacle, with a choir of 500 voices, tomorrow night and an excursion to the beach. At the annual banquet
Thursday evening, Alton B. Parker will preside.

A Business School might have comprehensive course of study without competent, experienced teachers, or competent teachers without comprehensive courses of study and up-to-date equipment, but in either case it would not be considered a good school.When the student and the business public find all these things combined with efficient management and an unbroken record of twenty-five years of success in training young men and young women for active business life, it is easy to understand why the JANSVILLE BUSINESS COLLEGE is considered the best school.Experience has taught us, that to serve the best interests of the student, the employer and ourselves, these essentials must be combined in a high degree of efficiency.In the management of this institution the requirements of the business public receive first consideration. The COURSES OF STUDY are arranged to conform to present-day demands. The TEACHERS are employed with a view to their individual capabilities in teaching their respective subjects.
The SCHOOL EQUIPMENT includes EVERY OFFICE APPLIANCE, EVERY OFFICE MACHINE and EVERY LABOR SAVING DEVICE in general use in the modern business office. The SCHOOL QUARTERS are well ventilated, sanitary, and amply furnished for the student's comfort.Emblem of Efficiency.The student attending the JANSVILLE BUSINESS COLLEGE enjoys the benefit of practical courses of study, efficient

NowFor the first time in her life Della wished she had been trained in some kind of business. All the women in the neighborhood seemed to be capable of doing some work in the great war crisis, and all the Americans living in London were doing their utmost to help, yet Della Thorne could do nothing.Twenty thousand women have registered themselves as capable of helping in some capacity or another, and I can't even use a typewriter intelligently or figure sufficiently well to sell ribbons behind a counter," Della thrust this appalling fact before her own mental outlook a hundred times a day. She worked herself into a fever of resentment against the system of development, or lack of development, that surrounded the idle rich. For Della was one of the idle rich.A letter which reached the honorable secretary of the Woman's Emergency corps was the outcome of Della's frantic desire to do something and to become a part of the great struggling nation.The honorable secretary, Miss Diana Mershon, tossed the letter to her brother, who sat working laboriously over the day's correspondence.
Had Jack Mershon possessed half of the robust supply of health with which his handsome elder was endowed, he would have been in the continental trenches with his comrades."There is a girl after your own art, Jack," laughed Diana. Diana Mershon was an avowed suffragette, a successful organizer, and she could make a telling speech before a multitude of people, but knew she would be a failure as a housemaker.Jack smiled at trifle wistfully and picked up the dainty little letter."Hon. Secretary, Dear Madam," he read, "I am one of the old-fashioned, ultra-feminine type of girls. Is there anything you could suggest my doing to help the government war service?
I can do absolutely nothing except keep house, since I have been perfectly trained for that purpose. I would be glad to keep house for some of you fortunate women who are out in the busy world; that I can do. Very sincerely, Della Thorne."Diana Mershon wondered, as her brother read this letter, if the thought it had inspired in her own mind would be suggested to him also. When he looked up she knew that it had."Bully idea," he exclaimed, as if Diana had already voiced her decision.
"We both need an intelligent person to take our household in charge, don't we?"She smiled a bit wistfully as she gazed at her brother.
"Poor old Jack, I know I have made rather a mess of homemaking. If Della Thorne can make an orderly home for us she will be doing her part in the Woman's Emergency corps. I want a real home as much as you, but I don't seem to know just how to manage it.""You can do everything else so well, Di," he said fondly. "Here you are about to help another poor soul
who is floundering about in the world.
By Jove, you're a brick!" Jack Mer-shon never quite knew whether it was admiration for his sister or relief in the prospect of having an old-fashioned woman in his household that drew forth his enthusiasm on this occasion.When Della arrived at the headquarters of the corps in answer to Diana Mershon's letter, she felt strangely elated. She had hungered so long to be of some service to someone that she entered Miss Mershon's office with a smile on her lips and a song in her heart."I feel that you are doing this almost out of charity," Della said to Miss Mershon, when arrangements for her to take charge of the big, untidykept home had been made.
"No, I have not," Diana assured her frankly. "My brother"—she glanced over at Jack who was trying his best not to stare at the new recruit—"requires a real home. If you can transform the four walls of this house into a real home for my brother and me I believe you will be doing as great a good for the country as any business woman could do.""I feel sure I can do that," Della agreed shyly, but with a look of confidence in her earnest eyes.A month later Jack and Diana went about their daily tasks free and reinvigorated. Gradually the four walls of the Mershon house became home
indeed, and Della was directly responsible for the metamorphosis. She had been given the opportunity to exercise her one talent and she had succeeded even beyond her expectation.
"How shall we ever do without her?" Diana said to Jack one day while they were still at the office.
"What will become of us when she leaves us?"There was a look of positive terror in her eyes and her voice was decidedly unsteady.
Jack smiled placidly. "Dear old Di,"
he said tenderly, "she will never leave us. I have already provided against such a frightful possibility.
She has promised to marry me."

MUNITIONS OF WAR.

Officially the United States has had its last say as regards the exportation of munitions of war to the belligerent nations of Europe. Secretary of State Lansing has officially answered the formal protest of Austria-Hungary with regard to an embargo on the exportation of war supplies. It is a clear, concise paper and officially states the United States can not stop the sale of arms to the allies.

In his rejoinder Secretary Lansing asserts:
1. That the United States will not change or modify the rules of international usage because Germany and Austria are unable to compete in American markets for American ammunition.

2. That to do so would be a gross violation of neutrality on the part of this country.
3. That the position of both Germany and Austria is inconsistent in that they—particularly Germany—have been the largest dealers in war supplies during wars in the last century.

4. That to yield to the Teuton contention now would revoke the established policy of the United States to insist upon the free dealing by all nations in military supplies in war time.
5. That the reiteration of this policy would force all countries of the world to turn their lands into armed camps in order to be prepared to resist invasion for conquest.

6. That such a course would do more to increase militarism in the world and to prevent the maintenance of peace by peaceful means than anything suggested.

7. That Austria's contentions with respect to the violation of Hague treaties by the United States in permitting arms exportations are not sustained.

8. That the position of this country has been sufficiently plain to warrant the ending of the discussion. This is the final word in this matter and should set at rest the useless arguments and talk as to what the attitude of the United States should be under present conditions.

WHAT IT MEANS.

Here is a dispatch sent out by the International News Service and published in newspapers taking this service this morning, as to what has been accomplished by the Nineteen Wisconsin legislature. When it is considered that the press bureaus maintained at the state capital these past eight months have all been anti-administration the dispatch really is more significant than ever and tells a story all its own. In plain words the story told is one of defeat for the anti-administration forces and victory for the conservative element. It means that the "tax-eaters" were defeated in their effort to burden the state with further expenses and that their talking arguments of what a great benefit progressivism was for Wisconsin was now a thing of the past. It has been a long, hard fight. It has been an uphill battle against odds. It has not been a fight against the educational interests of the state. It has not been a contest to make a political campaign slogan, but a battle royal to wage the war against high taxes in behalf of the taxpayers of the people of the state. The final outcome has been satisfactory and the dispatch referred to tells the story in a brief, concise manner that must prove satisfactory to the public at large.

Governor Philipp will save the taxpayers of Wisconsin $8,000,000 during the next two years. Of this amount $6,000,000 is in appropriations made by the legislature, and $2,000,000 will be in remission of state educational taxes. This is the first cut since La Follette first became governor in 1900. Taxes have risen under progressive rule from $4,000,000 a year to $16,000,000.

Now we are told that it was Noah that ate of the apple and drove all of us out of the Garden of Eden. Eve has been so long credited with the crime that it is a relief to know that mere man is the one to blame. Perhaps we may next learn that Mother Eve's tears over the fate of the world caused the flood. Nothing would surprise us now.

That educational measure, while not just what the governor wanted, accomplishes a great good when it takes the expenditures of the various institutions out of the hands of the regents and places them under the direction of a board of level-headed business men.

The Milwaukee brewers have fallen out. Perhaps now the public may learn the real reason for the source of the liquor traffic. Insistence of the brewery owners that saloons they are backing regardless of the ordinances and regulations of the city they are located in. Fight it out, gentlemen, and the great and glorious state of Wisconsin will vote "dry" on the most opportunity offered.

Apparently the great western hemisphere is divided into two divisions: the consolidated American republics and General Carranza.

Taking it all in all the "Tax-eaters" must be sadly disappointed. They did not succeed in looting the state treasury half as badly as they hoped for and had been given reason to suspect they could.

Governor Philipp is not letting one of his proposed state machine slip. He knows everything that is going on and he keeps in touch with all the details of state affairs just the same as he did of his own private business.

Taking it all in all the "tax-eaters" have not obtained such a sweeping victory in Wisconsin this year after all. They found that in Philipp they had met a fighter of the calibre they had not before encountered.

Speaker Whitte made good as head of the Wisconsin assembly of 1915. Everyone who knew him was confident he would, but it is some satisfaction to the friends of the speaker to say, "I told you so."

Evidently some of the gratters who attended the Janesville fair last week failed at their work on the grounds and then made a good get-away-haul at several private residences Saturday night.

Haiti has selected a new president. His last president's week was up last Wednesday and if they hope to continue in the business of killing state officials they had to have a new one handy for the job.

Present accounts seem to indicate that there is a great sufficiency of melons in the country yet to supply all demands. It is cheering news in this wet season.

Colonel Buckingham calls the United States army a joke. Well, some people have thought so before, but when the time comes they are there with the goods.

The Janesville fair was a great institution. Now for the Rock County fair at Evansville this present week, and the Beloit fair next. Some fair community.

Carranza has been making extensive repairs on his typewriter and is now ready to issue a general defy to the world as a whole. Good for the typewriter.

The taxpayers of the state can breathe easier now. The legislature has practically completed its labors of the past eight months. Hurray!

The Janesville fair is over. Now for the Rock County fair at Evansville. Be sure and plan to attend this official county organization.

SNAP SHOTS

There is no reason to doubt the sincerity of a woman who voluntarily wears a Salvation Army bonnet.

When it comes to combing a customer's hair, the barber does his best. But that is all that can be said for the job.

One thing has been definitely established: The people often fail to vote as they cheer.

In a small town most of the scorn and contumely is directed toward the man who wears white flannel trousers. But a little of it is saved for the man who beats his wife.

Some women are born beautiful and others have beauty thrust upon them by the society reporter who writes up the wedding.

Another objection to marriage is the guilty parties get no time off for good behavior.

It all depends. If you are not interested in golf it is a bore. If you are it is a disease.

People generally speak well of Hobe Fisher, who is a hopeless inefficient and who has been a burden on his wife's people ever since he was married. But they bitterly attack Samuel Plympton, who is rich and efficient, and one of the fairest men in town.

The country has had about the usual amount of rain, but the Atlantic Monthly still is very dry.

In our town of Grigsby City the only really noted man is John Klopier, who chewed tobacco thirty-one years and then quit.

Those Picture Posters, they constitute a bore. I get a dozen every day; they surely make me sore.

I labor in an office hot; it makes me wild to think The beauties of a western trip are for some other gink.

I get 'em from the mountains and I get 'em from the plain, And every one I get gives me a large three-cornered pain.

I'd like to choke the guy who sent the one I got today, Which shows the wondrous beauties of the fair old "Frisco" way.

Those pretty cards all emphasize the fact that I must sweat, While others are out seeking all the joy that they can get.

They make me realize that I a slave must be, While those fool friends of mine do naught but frolic by the sea.

But when the evening rolls around, I do not care to roam; With my young kins upon my knee, I'm doggone glad I'm home.

Naming the Baby. Dear Sir: We don't know what to name the baby and we have decided to appeal to you, hoping for some advice in your daily column of Mental Uplift and Higher Ideals. Please favor us with some suggestions.

MRS. L. P. W. Certainly, madam. If it is a boy name him Clarence, Percy, Roy, Perle, Cecil, Alwyn, Cyril, Guy, or Wilfred. If it is a girl name her Fanny, Violet, Fess, Birdie, Duckie, Tootsie or Dove. Then when the baby grows up to be a 200-pounder the name will just suit it. Great many parents make the mistake of selecting sensible names. This should not be done under any circumstances.

The Greek classic names are very nice. For a girl there is Iodine, Belladonna, Menthol, Sodozod, Arnica, Vermifuge, Hydrophobia, Tragicantia, Sathapatica, Listerine, Anti-Phlogistine, Alabastine, Scartaria or Linoleum. The Greek classics contain also some very good substantial names for men, including Erysipelas, Pneumonia, Lumbago, Appendicitis, Quinzy, Bronchitis, Paralysis, Paresis, Ecze-ma, Apollinaris or Calomel.

But it really doesn't matter what you name the baby, both you and the baby will wish that you had named it something different.

Contributed Advice to Autoists. In passing a hospital or any place where nervous or sickly persons are congregated, always toot your horn. It will stir them up and put them on the fact that some one is passing in an auto.

Never heed the traffic cop's signals. He's just stationed there for ornamental purposes.

If you fear fire in your auto, install a spark extinguisher on your spark plug.

Never use toilet soap when washing your machine. It is too expensive, and old fashioned dishwater suds will suffice.

If you wish to confuse the traffic cop, when speeding, place your tail light in front and headlights in the rear. The officer will not know whether you are coming or going.

And Here's Another Line. I do not sing of gibbous moons, of argosies of flame, Of love's eternal poppycock, nor of brands of scorching shame;

I do not sing of bosky dells, or septimal shaws, Of convoluted wampuses of epicycloid cams, Nor do I sing of psychic trends, nor auras lurking there.

I do not sing the Cosmic Urge, nor Bunkum's Liver Pill, I do not sing a blooming thing, I merely sing to fill.

THE MIRACLE. Oh, he was badly hurted. Oh, yes, indeed, indeed. But then 'long comes the doctor, To tend his every need.

Young Dr. Smittybrew leaped from his automobile. He and shouldered his way through the crowd.

"What's the matter here? I'm a doctor," he cried. "I'm a physician! What's the trouble? I'm a doctor!"

"Man fractured his leg," they told him. On the pavement lay a man, moaning and groaning in rapid succession. One leg was twisted into the shape of the figure 8.

"A bad fracture. Bad," said Dr. Smittybrew. "I fear I cannot fix it in less than four minutes. Give me room, please. I'm a doctor. I'm a physician. H'm. Scabdinia ossified. H'm."

They made room for him, and with-out even removing the groaning man's trousers, the doctor deftly straightened the leg in two and a half minutes.

"Now, in case it's not stronger than it was before you fractured it, come and see me at my office. I'll leave you a card." And Dr. Smittybrew carelessly drew three dozen cards from his pocket and scattered them among the crowd, meanwhile whispering to the man with the rubber leg, "Next break in front of Woosie's drug store at 11:45."

Hub of Three Nations. An Alpine point of curious interest just now, as the meeting place of two hostile nations and an anxiously observant neutral, is the Dreisprachen-spitze (9,328 feet) near the Stelvio pass.

As the name implies, this height is the spot where not only three nations—Switzerland, Italy and Austria—meet, but three languages—German, Italian and the Latin of eastern Switzerland. Two similarly named peaks in the Alps have lost political significance, since the Hapsburgs now own, in the one case, all three countries, in the other, two of the three—the Dreiherrnspezitze, junction of Tyrol, Salzburg and Goerz, and the Dreilander Spitze, junction of Tyrol, the Vorarlberg and Switzerland.—London Chronicle.

Progress From Napoleon. Napoleon's famous saying was that "an army travels on its belly," which was to say that it had to depend on its food supply, and could not with safety move faster than its commissary department. The Galician campaign has demonstrated that in modern warfare an army advances on its ammunition supply. It may have food in plenty, but without an enormous supply of shells and shrapnel and smaller ammunition it cannot make progress against a well-armed enemy.

Chance for Investment. "It's remarkable how many things can be bought nowadays on the installment plan," said the city boarder.

"Ain't it, though?" assented Silas Plumbery. "The last time I was up to the city a feller offered to sell me the biggest skyscraper in town for $100 down and $10 a month."

Happiness. Money will not procure happiness, but happiness will help procure money. Happiness makes every task a pleasure and every worker optimistic, and an optimistic worker at a pleasant task can perform it in no way but well. Happiness is not only its own reward, but it is an irresistible magnet which is forever drawing unexpected rewards. And happiness can know no evil; evil happiness is a contradiction of terms. Happiness is a religion in itself. He who has happiness has jumped just over the very goal of life.

JACOB'S LITTLE JOKE

ELABORATE LUNCH NOT APPRECIATED BY "TRAMP."

No Doubt He Enjoyed It, but Snowy Table Linen and Other "Fixings" Were Something That He Could Have Done Without.

Just as Sarah was putting the finishing touches to the dinner, Jacob came in from his store down town, and, sniffing the pleasant odor of food, remarked: "Sarah, could thee fix me up some lunch for a poor tramp?"

"Why, of course, Jacob, I could fix it up for thee; but why not bring the tramp in here, so that no one may see him eat?"

"Well, the poor fellow has traveled many miles today, and I left him down at the store; but if thee will fix me some lunch, I'll carry it down to him on my return."

"All right, thee go ahead and eat thy lunch, and when thee is ready to go back, I'll have his lunch ready for thee."

So saying, Jacob passed into the dining room, and when Sarah had him safely employed eating her delicious and substantial meal, she left him to his own devices and repaired to the kitchen, where she first laid a large basket with one of her snowy damask napkins, then, thinking that tramps would enjoy having a meal look inviting as well as anyone else, she got out her best covered dish, in which she placed a liberal piece of steak, then bread and butter, and small dishes, each with its separate cover, in which she placed mashed potatoes, green peas, stewed tomatoes, a bottle of coffee and custard and cake for dessert.

She then covered the basket with another snowy napkin, and when Jacob had finished his lunch, gave him the basket to carry back to the store.

Upon Jacob's return home that evening, with the basket and empty dishes, Sarah asked: "Did thy tramp enjoy his dinner?"

"Did he enjoy it?" asked Jacob. "Well, I guess he did. He ate everything but the tomatoes and coffee, and I finished them for him."

"Strange that he did not drink the coffee," murmured Sarah.

"Why, not at all strange, Sarah. I never yet saw a dog that drank or enjoyed coffee," Jacob answered, striving not to smile.

"What does thee mean, a dog? Jacob, I am ashamed of thee for speaking of a poor fellow in such a manner," Sarah chided him.

"But, my dear Sarah, I tell thee it was a dog," dryly remarked Jacob, then, unable to contain himself any longer, he shouted with laughter.

Needless to say, Sarah has never forgiven Jacob for allowing her to go to all the fuss she did, over a tramp dog, and whenever the name of dog is mentioned she looks at Jacob in a commanding way, warning him not to attempt to tell of her tramp.

THIEVES RUN RIOT MAKING BIG HAULS IN EVERY ATTEMPT

SATURDAY NIGHT AND SUNDAY MORNING ROBBERIES NET INTRUDERS CURRENCY AND VALUABLE JEWELRY.

Thieves made generous hauls in the city Saturday night or Sunday morning, and the police have half a dozen cases of robbery on their minds. They are investigating this morning left over from last week. The total loot of the gangs of sneak thieves, key pickers and police robbers, will reach around one thousand dollars and as yet the police have not been able to fix the blame. On Saturday the residence of Frank Blodgett, at 825 Court street, was ransacked by a skillful sneak thief and between six and seven hundred dollars worth of jewelry taken. Besides this there was $150 in money missing at the home of J. J. Kelly, on Chatham street; watches and rings and $20 from the home of Daniel McGinley, Prospect avenue; two dentists' office in the Jackson block; an attempt to snatch the purse of two women on West Bluff street; and a sneak thief robbery at the home of George Slightman home on Sunday afternoon.

The work of the robber at the Blodgett residence was that of an expert, and there is a bare chance that this sneak thief is the same as the one who made every effort to locate him Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett and daughter, Miss Clara, were sitting on the back veranda in the evening before the sneak thief entered the house, unlocked and the thief evidently wearing "sneakers," walked in the door and took his time in searching the house. He probably saw the family sitting on the porch, and the dense shrubbery that surrounds the house, and after making his preliminary examination, proceeded with ease and perfect abandon to make his unelcome visit. He did not even look at the door, but went to the second floor, where there was less chance of being heard.

Loots Upstairs.
He went into every room, opening every drawer, turning over the floor, overturning bed clothing, and taking all the jewelry he uncovered. Hardly a thing did he miss, all was scooped up. About five minutes after the party left the house, he heard a noise, and believing it must be a burglar Mrs. Blodgett ran across the street to the Palmer home to telephone to the police. Mr. Blodgett then returned to the house and opened the drawer where he kept a loaded revolver. The weapon was gone, and his watch and jewelry along with it. The thief could not have left as it was as it was in the room, it is thought the intruder was in the bathroom when Mr. Blodgett was going upstairs. Mrs. Blodgett caught a fleeting glimpse of the man as he went out the door, and at the time thought it was her husband.

The police on receiving the warning hastened to the house with an automobile, picking up the street patrolman and went to Milwaukee street. As they came to the house the officers separated and the place and grounds were searched thoroughly. Patrolman Charles Harmon found in an upstairs room a sack of the thief's loot, through the upper pane of a window which opened to the front porch. In his haste the thief had carried the window shade with him in his cap. From there the thief had but short jump to the ground and to elude the officers in the shrubbery was an easy matter.

List of Property.
The list of jewelry and valuables stolen and given to the police was as follows: Gold wrist watch, Elgin make, with monogram E. M. B.; diamond and pearl sunburst brooch; diamond ring; Florentine necklace; ruby pendant of diamond set in ring; Delta Gamma sorority pin; gold chain with cameo drop; gold chain with pearl drop; gold chain with diamond and pearl drop; gold watch with monogram M. B.; gold watch with monogram C. M. B.; gold circle pin with pearl; coral ring; two coral pins; gold necklace with seven coral roses; drop earring; pearl ring; small gold wedding ring; one baby ring; gold ring with letter L; chain bracelet with small diamond; Phi Psi fraternity pin with letter L; gold bracelet with cluster pearl pendant; silver chain and 32-caliber revolver. The total value as given out will amount to between six and seven hundred dollars. One of the members of the family was out of the city or the loss would have been greater.

Used Painter's Ladder.
Some time Friday a sneak thief used a ladder that was left near one of the front windows by a painter at the residence of Mrs. Blodgett, Sunday night watchman, at 723 Prospect avenue, to enter the residence while three members of the family were sleeping in the house or sitting downstairs. The intruder went to the upstairs rooms and took five rings, two gold watches and thirty-two dollars in currency from the bureau drawers. The money and rings belonged to Miss Genevieve McGinley and were concealed in a jewelry box.

The loss from this robbery was not discovered until Saturday afternoon, no one going into the rooms until that time. A check of a large amount was left behind by the sneak thief. It is thought probable that this robbery was done by the same thief who tried to enter the residence of F. F. Lewis.

Took Currency.
At the J. Kelly home, 15 North Chatham street, currency to the amount of $150 was stolen. The thief or thieves discovered the money, three bills of $50 denomination, secreted in a clothes closet. The three Kelly children, two daughters and son, were asleep on the second floor. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly were in Milwaukee and it was not until their return last evening that the real loss was known.

Attempt at Robbery.
A purse snatcher was resisted in his attempt to grab the pocketbook of Mrs. A. E. Johnson, 303 Chatham street, Saturday night about ten o'clock on West Bluff street. A young man of rough appearance, followed Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Wilbur Sumner, 1308 West Bluff street, from Milwaukee street, and near the Schwartz warehouse, where the street is poorly lighted, made the robbery attempt. He brushed close to Mrs. Johnson in passing the two women and in going past grabbed her pocketbook and jerked hard. Mrs. Johnson, however, expected the robbery attempt, and held tight to the purse and screamed. The erstwhile thief walked ahead and disappeared. The police in an auto searched the First ward but found no one answering the description of the man.

Robs Dentist's Office.
This morning when Dr. C. C. Devereaux returned to his office, after a two weeks' vacation he was surprised to find that he had been visited during his absence by the gang of gold thieves that have been operating in this community during the last two weeks. The pickpockets, who had molten gold and slugs were taken and the cheaper material left behind with expert skill. It is believed that this gang of thieves, who were seen in the office of Dr. C. C. Devereaux, had ransacked last week and about forty dollars worth of gold material taken. The amount stolen from Dr. Devereaux's office will amount to about one hundred dollars. Dentist offices in Beloit, Rockford, Edgerton, and Madison were robbed last week and the same gang must have visited this city.

On Saturday night the police started to make a round-up and about a dozen men were taken into custody. The department expresses a belief that all the robberies, with the exception of the Blodgett one, were done by crooks that followed the fair the big robbery, however, shows the work of an expert.

WOMAN'S PAGE

SIDE TALKS

BY RUTH CAMERON

A "QUEER" WOMAN.

"Yes," said the woman who sees everything, "I noticed a light in her guest-room three night running and I supposed she must have some guest; but I couldn't see anyone there daytimes. So finally I brought the conversation round to the subject, and my dear, what do you think?"

"Yes," said the other woman, "I noticed a light in her guest-room three night running and I supposed she must have some guest; but I couldn't see anyone there daytimes. So finally I brought the conversation round to the subject, and my dear, what do you think?"

"She has had her maid come down there to sleep, because it's hot in the garret these nights!"

She made no comment on the astonishing fact. She had no need to. Her voice supplied the statement with at least three exclamations.

"That lovely room!" said the other woman.

"Yes," said the woman who sees everything, "Isn't it just like her? She spoils every maid she had by treating them that way."

It certainly is, said the other woman, and they looked their thankfulness that they were not as this woman and passed on to other subjects, utterly unconscious that "Isn't it just like her?" might not have been considered commendation by some people.

It is astonishing how many women there are who regard the extension of simple decenties to the servant in the house as something "queer" and peculiar ("racked" or "selfish" have hardly so completely a condemnatory flavor as these two).

I was perfectly astonished when I heard a woman whom I have always thought a kindly and broad-minded person say the other day, "And what do you think, her maid actually asked if she might use the telephone to call up her aunt!"

I was much interested to notice that in "The Treasure" which describes an ideal school for training domestic helpers, one of the rules of the school is that when its graduates accept positions they shall be permitted the use of the bath-tub twice a week. There are many families to whom this idea would be anathema. Yet these are the same people who would criticize maids for lack of personal cleanliness.

"Their problems are our problems," says Emma McChesney of the girls in her shop. "They use garlic instead of onion, and they don't bathe as often as we do; but they perhaps we wouldn't if we hadn't tubs and showers so handy."

I recommend that thought to the folks who deny the use of bathing facilities to their maids and then criticize them for lack of personal cleanliness.

A maid once told me that when she started to bathe in her second situation (she was a nice, cleanly girl and had been freely permitted the use of the bath in her first situation), so she did not realize that she should ask permission her employers, two primo maiden ladies, actually asked her to bathe in the bathroom door, almost broke it down and frightened her into hysterics before she realized what the matter was. She was ordered to leave the house that night without a character.

Yes, I know there are women whom one would not want to permit the use of the tub or the phone either. But are these the same who would want handling one's food? Why not have a cleanly, decent helper and treat her humanely.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Poor little fellow! He's so uncomfortable," said Nell.

"Yes, and he is making himself more so all the time by his yelling; he's working himself up into a regular fever!"

Dick rolled over with a groan.

"I'll take him into the living room and room and him; that will quiet him," Nell took the crying baby in her arms.

"His teeth are hurting him; there is more disturbance when cutting than with any others."

"Now try to go to sleep, dear," she cooed. "You must be tired."

"I can't sleep," he said, "I can't sleep during the day when he is quiet."

She seated herself in a rocking chair by the open window and began to swing gently back and forth, but the baby refused to be quieted.

Unable longer to endure the frantic screaming, Dick presently appeared in his pajamas.

"Give him to me. It won't tire me so much to walk with him as to listen to his yelling," he placed the baby over his shoulder and began pacing up and down the room.

"You go and lie down," he urged. "Even if you can't sleep, it will rest you."

"I wish he would let me quiet him. It worries me to have you lose so much sleep when you are so worn out," Nell reluctantly left the room.

Up and down Dick walked, carrying the screaming child. Nell, utterly exhausted from the hard day, had fallen into a heavy sleep, and so Dick, when she was aroused by his crying, saying in angry emphasis: "Stop it! Stop that noise!"

"There's no sense in that," the crying showed that Dick was shaking the boy. Nell sprang out of bed and hurried to the living room.

"I shall be afraid to have you touch him," she sobbed to her baby, especially a teething baby, should be spanked."

"I didn't hurt him; only gave him a couple of little slaps. They startled him, but he's all right now. He's something to think about. He would have been yelling yet if I hadn't."

She made no answer.

"Well, I think this thing out later; let's sleep now that we have a chance," and he kissed her good night.

Household Hints

TO PEEL TOMATOES.

Run a fork through the stem end of the tomato. Light the small flame burner to the gas stove. Hold the tomato over the flame and turn slowly. The skin will soon burst open and it may be peeled easily.

This is much better than pouring hot water over them, as the tomato does not heat through and it is much more quickly done.

FOR PRICKLY HEAT.

This is a safe remedy for prickly heat: Get five cents' worth of powdered slippery elm from the drug store. Put in a powder box with a sifter top, or use a salt shaker that's not in use. Use this as you would any talcum powder. Fine for the babies.

LEMONS IN SUMMER.

Make lemons one of your staples, especially during hot weather; do not get two or three lemons, but get them by the dozen, wash Mrs. Anna B. Scott in the Philadelphia North American.

Lemons are good for many other things besides a cooling drink. For ices, ice cream, cold puddings, for flavoring, to use on lettuce for those who may not use vinegar. A hint for the busy office woman or man during the next few weeks. Try egg lemonade for the noon luncheon with a few waters or a piece of sponge cake.

To make egg lemonade use three tablespoons lemon juice, three tablespoons sugar or sugar taste, one fresh raw egg, three-quarters glass of water and one tablespoon finely cracked-ice. Put in shaker, or two tumblers which will fit over one another, shake well and strain.

TYPES

BY SARA MOORE

GOOD WILL; BAD WILL.

The homesome old lady's store is tucked in between a grocery and a pawnshop, on a noisy street shaded by an elevated railroad. Mostly the thoroughfare is crowded with throngs from hundreds of frowny tenements; but the district adjoins a cluster of club, studio buildings, large apartment houses and small hotels that encourage local tradesmen to prepare for a higher grade of patronage.

Adaptable storekeepers, enterprising enough to cater to this growing trade are becoming prosperous on custom that used to flow to larger—and distant—business centers. The notion shop, although clean and well-stocked, is one of those still stubbornly clinging to the shabby and frugal; it seems to resent the increasing demands of those in the richer center of the neighborhood.

"The old lady is as picturesque as a village spinster store-keeper," observed the reporter who discovered the place.

"The shop, too, has all the fascination of a country store," whispered the artist, deciding to get a new paint apron.

Instead of five cents, they spent three dollars. After that, the "handiness" of the shop brought them in several times a week. They made friendly overtures to the silent, lonely woman behind the counter, but it was a month before the artist got her wax wordy.

"Trade on this street is mostly after five o'clock," she volunteered, when the girl found her at the door late one afternoon. "We do most business after men who work by the day come home with their pay. I am open until nine o'clock and Saturdays until ten."

They touched on trade, weather and Quaker collars. The artist went away smiling at having made a friendly impression.

Suppression of opium traffic is successful. Peking, Aug. 16.—In and around the coast provinces of China, the suppression of opium traffic by the Chinese Government officials has been effected so thoroughly that the opium dealers are flocking in increasing numbers under the protection of the foreign settlement in Shanghai, their activities restricted. London, Aug. 16.—A year of war has worked a revolution in the army and navy, a new system based on well known principles, but entirely novel in application, was substituted. One of the elementary principles of physics is that if a vessel contains two solutions of varying strength divided from each other by a canal membrane, liquid will pass from the weaker to the stronger solution until ultimately both are at the same strength. This principle was brought into action in the treatment of wounds in order to stimulate the action of the serum of the blood, which has strong antiseptic properties. The wound, with the liquid solution of salt and sodium citrate, a considerably greater concentration than that in the serum of the blood. Under the influence of this liquid the serum poured out from the body into the wound, tending both to cleanse it and to destroy the bacteria that are present.

This system has the great advantage that it does not depend on the use of the fluids used for the destruction of germs. "The full recognition of the efficiency of this method, introduced largely through the efforts of Sir Almroth Wright, says a medical writer, 'must regard as one of the most important advances made in surgery as a result of the war.'"

END OF WAR WILL NOT BRING PEACE SAYS THE DEAN OF DURHAM. The North China News, describing the drawing says:

"The drawing was conducted on a platform, and the people, whose fortunes were temporarily or permanently at stake stood earnestly, scrutinizing every move in the procedure. Great care was, of course, taken to ensure accuracy in drawing and recording numbers, and the Chinese who held up the ball as it came from the machine were careful to let it be seen between his thumb and finger, and to have his long sleeves well rolled back. The proceedings were conducted without a hitch, the drawings being completed within an hour."

The night view of Valparaiso from the balconies of the cliff dwellers is one of the great sights of the world. The vast sickle of the shore lit for nearly two hundred thousand people, the scores of ocean vessels lying at anchor, the harbor lights, the glowing avenues below from which rises mellowed the roar of nocturnal traffic, the rippling water under the moonlight and the far horizon of the illimitable Pacific produce an effect of enchantment.—Edward Elsworth Ross "South of Panama."

NORWEGIAN AUTOMOBILE OWNERS HARD HIT BY TIRE SHORTAGE

Christiania, August 16.—Norwegian owners of automobiles are hard hit by the announcement of dealers that the supply of tires has been exhausted and it is impossible to replenish the stock to any extent because the belligerent countries are taking up all the world's supply. At present it is said there is not a new tire to be bought at any price anywhere in Norway.

The situation is much more than annoying, for it will have a serious economical effect on Norwegian farming. It is doubtful that if any country has adopted the automobile more extensively in a public way for in Norway the sparsely settled hills have never been able to support railways and the automobile has come to be the principal means of communication and transportation both for the farmer and commercial men. The innumerable cars which have been put to service in recent years are all of foreign manufacture, for there is no automobile factory in Norway, and the same is true as to oil, gasoline and tires. The importation of tires has steadily decreased since the European war began, and the present impossibility of obtaining them has forced many of the taxicabs in Christiania to go out of business. The cars on the public automobile routes in the country are wearing their tires down to the last thread, and it appears their service may soon have to be cancelled.

The Royal Automobile club, of which King Haakon is honorary president, is now petitioning the foreign governments in the hope of getting permission to import tires, with guaranty on the part of Norway that the tires will not be exported to any of the belligerent nations.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have met a married man in secret several times, which I know is wrong. I knew and loved him before he was married, a year ago. Now, he did not marry for love, but to please his folks. They, as well as his, are well. He realizes his mistake, and he says he'll divorce his wife (if he has a chance) if I will marry him. Now, shall I refuse him, which would mean a broken heart for me, or should I accept him, which would mean unhappiness for both? Mrs. Thompson, this is not "puppy love," for we are both old enough to know and have loved one another for five years. I know his love is true, for it has been tested and tried time and time again. What shall I do?

BROKEN-HEARTED DUTCH. If I thought accepting him would mean happiness for all concerned, I would say go ahead and do it. But, judging from the little you have told me in your letter, I am inclined to doubt the man's honor. When a man loves a girl, and you say he has you for five years, he is not apt to marry another girl because his parents want him to. He first considers his own interests and those of the girl he loves. I am also suspicious of this man because, while he considers divorcing his wife for things she does, he has secret meetings with another woman. For your own happiness I advise you to have nothing more to do with the man.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have two girls aged twelve and fourteen who seem stupid about talking when in company. Could you mention some book for them to read that will brighten up their intellects and give them confidence? They do not have much chance to go away, I think it is partly because of their appearing dull. I think if they could make themselves more interesting it would lend happiness

He laughed, and the second match went out, leaving us again in darkness.

"Nor was it, officially; merely a friendly letter from an officer on Heitzman's staff to our major asking for you a friendly reception. Camp gossip brought the news to me. You knew Harwood?"

"No, only General Ramsay advised me to confer with him, because of his intimate knowledge of this section. He belonged, I believe, in Green Briar?"

"Yes, we were at his place yesterday; south of Lewisburg. What sort of a looking man was this fellow Taylor?"

I described him minutely, hoping for some recognition, but the captain did not appear to recall any such character.

"We have only been in this region a few months," he said, in explanation, "and I don't remember any such chap. He is none of Ramsay's scouts." What do you say, Snow?"

"Only man like that I've heard of, sir, is old Ned Cowan, and it ain't likely he's left the mountains to go into 'Old Jack's' camp."

Fox laughed, as though the idea amused him.

"Hardly. Cowan is too well known to take the risk. Either side would hang the bound on sight. Well, let's ride along into Hot Springs. You'll come with us, Lieutenant?"

There was no excuse left me, no reason that I could urge for riding on alone westward. Indeed, before I could clearly collect my thoughts, I was in the midst of the horsemen, slowly moving east once more over the dark road. Riding as rapidly as the darkness made possible, we clattered into the deserted street at Hot Springs, and Fox cursed vigorously the negligent guard. The sergeant knew little of where Major Harwood had gone, as he had given no orders, and not even intimated the probable time of his return. When last seen he was riding out the south road accompanied only by his servant.

Fox swore again, and ordered the men into saddle, and we swung out on a sharp trot along the dirt pike. I rode next him, but the captain was in such rage I kept silent, knowing well the tragic discovery soon to be revealed. The gray dawn began to steal about us, making objects near at hand visible, and revealing the tired faces of the cavalymen. There was sufficient light to enable us to perceive the gloomy house in the oak grove, and the motionless form lying beside the gate. Fox drew up his horse with a jerk, and leaned forward staring.

"My God, men!" he exclaimed, choking. "That's Harwood's nigger. Turn the body over, Green—ah! the poor devil was knifed. Here, a half dozen of you, unsling carbines and follow me—there's been dirty work done. Sergeant, don't let your men destroy those footprints in the road. Lively now, lads!"

I advanced with them up the driveway, fearful that if I held back it might later be commented upon. The front door refused admittance, but we entered from the rear. Everything within was exactly as I had left it, and in the parlor, still dark because of closed blinds, lay the lifeless body of Harwood. Fox fell upon his knees beside the motionless form, ordering the windows thrown open, his hands touching the lifeless flesh.

"Dead for hours," he exclaimed in a tone of horror, turning his gaze upon me. "Struck from behind—see, Raymond. What in God's name can this mean?"

He began searching the pockets. "Not robbery—for here is money, and a watch. But the papers are gone, every scrap of them." He looked about at the men. "The major had his papers with him, did he not, Chambers?"

"Yes, sir," and the young, boyish soldier addressed straightened up. "I was with him when he put on chambers' clothes and he slipped a big buff packet into his pocket."

Fox's bewildered glance met mine. "Do you know what that packet contained, captain?" I questioned. "I do not know. Harwood expected to meet Taylor here at Hot Springs, but I think there were others to be here also. The major kept his own counsel, but something I overheard caused me to believe his engagement with Taylor was of a more private nature. Chambers was his clerk, perhaps he knows."

The lad shook his head, his eyes on the dead man. "I'm certain those papers were not meant for him, sir," he answered slowly. "They were to be given to a scout named Dailey. It was some other business that brought the major here all alone—but he never told me."

"Not Robbery, for Here Is Money and a Watch."

There was nothing further to be discovered, and Fox realized the necessity of haste. His orders were prompt. Four men were detailed to bury the body, and then rejoin the column as soon as possible. The others were marched back to the gate, and remounted.

It was an hour later when we came suddenly to the fork in the south branch leading over a long clay hill, the west along a rocky ridge. Fox sprang to the ground and followed the faint prints of the horse as we were pursuing for a hundred yards on foot. Some cattle had passed southward, but there was a defect in the shoe of the animal Taylor rode clearly revealed in the clay. The captain came back, a grim smile on his lips.

"The cuss was no Johnny Reb," he said shortly. "That was what I was afraid of, but now I know what to do. We'll save our horses, men, for this is going to be a long ride—that murdering devil is headed for the Green Briar. This is the lower Lewisburg road." He swung up into saddle.

"Green, take three men ahead with you, and keep half a mile in advance. Watch out carefully, for there may be graybacks along here. Going with us, Lieutenant?"

"About the best thing I can do," I replied readily, "my orders were for Green Briar and Fayette."

"All right, then, but they had small respect for your life when they sent you in there. From all I hear it is like a menagerie of wild animals broken loose—good fighting anywhere. Only trouble will be there is so much at home there will be no need for the boys to enlist. However, that's your affair, not mine." His eyes surveyed his men keenly. "Loosen carbines! Forward march! Trot!"

Silently, save for the jingle of accoutrements and the thud of horses' feet, we rode westward, sunlight flicking the dusty uniforms. The pike dipped down into a hollow and, climbing the hill beyond, appeared the figures of the four scouts. Far away was the haze of the mountains.

CHAPTER V.

The Night Attack.

The incidents of that ride do not remain with me in any special clearness of detail. We rode steadily, keeping well together, conscious that in all probability we were watched by hostile eyes, peering out from behind rock and thicket. We foraged through deserted shacks, finding poor reward, yet managed to subsist, although with hunger unsatisfied. The men grumbled and Fox swore, as, long before night came, he comprehended the fact that we were on a fool's errand; that his little squad was being lured deeper and deeper into a hostile country, but no opportunity to turn aside presented itself. The night overtook us in the midst of a mountain solitude. The scouts had discovered a spring at the bottom of a rocky hollow, and there

Fox reluctantly ordered camp to be made, the horses finding scant pasture beyond. The grumbling and cursing soon ceased, however, and those not on duty slept fitfully. I made the round of the sentries with Fox, slipping and stumbling over the rough way, through the darkness.

"This weird place gets on the nerves," he said, as if half ashamed of the confession. "Do you know, Raymond, I have felt for the last hour as if we were riding into some trap." He glanced nervously behind him. "I don't believe there has ever been a Federal detachment down as far as this before. We're in old Ned Cowan's country."

"Confederate?" I asked, interested at once by the name.

"Heaven knows! To the best of my belief the fellow doesn't give a whoop for either side. He's just a natural born devil and this war gave him a chance to get the hell out of his system. Still, I guess, he calls himself a Reb."

"And his followers?"

"Mountain men mostly, together with a bunch of deserters and conscripts from both sides. Nobody knows how big a band he has, but it would take an army to run them out of these mountains. We had orders to do it—but piffle! Ramsay came down as far as Fayette Court House with a regiment of infantry, and a cavalry guard, and sent out a flag of truce asking the devil to come in and talk with him. He actually did come; rode right up to headquarters, with a dozen of his ragged followers, heard what Ramsay had to say, and then simply told this general to go to hell, and rode off again."

"Where you there? Did you see the men?"

"No, but the sergeant did; he was detailed at that time as headquarters orderly."

"Yes," I said, determined on my course. "I was talking with Hayden during the noon halt. He described Cowan to me, and I believe he is the same man I encountered at Hot Springs. Captain Fox—the fellow Taylor we are in pursuit of."

The captain stared into the black night, silent for several minutes.

"I've been suspecting the same thing for the last three hours," he admitted at last slowly, "and that he hoped we would follow him. The fellow hasn't ridden fast, and has purposely left a plain trail. More than that he was expected along this road and there were relays of horses waiting. He only changed once, but he was met by another party near that ruined mill. Ever since then I have felt that we were being watched by unseen eyes. Did you observe the curl of smoke to our right just before dark—how it rose and fell in rings?"

"I saw the smoke, yes—a thin spiral, but supposed it to be from the chimney of some mountain shack."

"Well, it was not. That was an outside fire, and the smoke was smothered and then thrown up by blankets. That is their way of signaling. I tell you, Lieutenant, this murder of Harwood is more than an army matter. It was either the culmination of a feud—done for personal revenge—or else the major had papers in his possession bearing on the situation here that could only be gained over his dead body. The man who killed him was old Ned Cowan."

"But Harwood must have known him," I protested.

"Of course he did; they were neighbors before the war and met there by appointment. For all I know the major may have had some confidential communication from the war department. God knows what it was. All I am sure about is that I would give a good deal to be out of this fix right now and twenty miles to the north of here."

We sat there for half an hour discussing the matter and endeavoring to convince ourselves the danger was less than we imagined. There was nothing to be done but wait for daylight. Finally Fox crept forth again to make another round of the pickets, to assure himself they were alert, and before he returned I had fallen asleep.

The chill of the night awoke me, cold and shivering. The wind had arisen and swept down the funnel in which I lay with an icy breath against which my single blanket afforded no protection. The man who had been lying next me was gone, and so there must have been a change of guard while I slept. I could distinguish, dimly outlined against the sky, the overhanging rock-wall which inclosed our camp, and the deeper shade of a cleft a yard or two to my left, where the dead trunk of a tree stood like a gaunt, ugly sentinel.

As I lay staring the figure of a man slipped out from behind its protection and, dropping on hands and knees, crept forward across the open space. Another and another followed, mere ghostlike shadows, scarcely appearing real. For the instant I doubted my eyesight, imagined I dreamed. Then, before I could raise voice in alarm, a rifle spat viciously, the red flame of its discharge cleaving the night. A fusillade followed and in the flare I caught grotesque glimpses of men leaping forward, and there was a confused yelling of voices, a din of noise.

I was upon my knees, revolver in hand, but in the melee below could not distinguish friend from foe—alike they were a blur of figures, one instant visible, the next obscured. Yet there could be no doubt as to the final ending of the struggle. Taken by surprise, outnumbered, the little squad of troopers would be crushed, annihilated. Nor was there reason why I should sacrifice myself in their defense—a valueless sacrifice. My choice was instantly made, as there flashed to my mind what my fate would be if I ever fell into Cowan's hands attired in Federal uniform.

On hands and knees I crept to the cleft in the rock wall and began to clamber up over the irregular rocks. The shouts and yells, the cries for mercy, the sound of blows, grew fainter and finally ceased altogether. Leaning back and looking down I could perceive nothing in the black void. A voice shouted an order, but it sounded far off and indistinct. I was in a narrow gully, the incline less steep than amid the rocks below, and could perceive the lighter canopy of the sky not far above me.

As I crept out into the open space someone touched a match to a pile of dry limbs in the cave below, and the red flames leaped high, revealing the scene. I caught a glimpse of it—staring down as though I clung at the mouth of hell, seeing moving, black figures, and the dark, motionless shadows of dead men. The one glimpse was enough, the fearful tragedy of it smiting me like a blow, and I turned and ran, stumbling over the rough ground, my only thought that of escape.

There were stars in the sky, their dim light sufficient to yield some faint guidance. My course led me close beside the edge of the ridge. Here the ground fell away to the banks of a shallow stream and some instinct of woodcraft led me to wade down with its current for a considerable distance, until the icy water drove me to the bank once more. I knew I had covered several miles and was beyond pursuit and safe from discovery. I remained there until dawn, the first gray light giving assurance that my flight had been to the north along the foothills. From the ridge top a wide vista lay revealed of rough, seemingly uninhabited country, growing more distinct as the light strengthened. There was no house visible, no sign of any road; all about extended a rude mountain solitude, but to the north-west there was a perceptible break in the chain of hills, as though a pass led down into the concealed valley beyond. With this for guidance I plunged forward, eager to get out of that drear wilderness.

It was considerably after the noon hour before I came upon a dismal shack of logs in the midst of a small clearing. The light streaming in through the open door revealed that it was unoccupied. Yet someone had been there, and not so very long ago, for there were scraps of food on one of the overturned boxes. Unappetizing as these appeared, I sat down and ate heartily, then got to my feet and, closing the door securely behind me, plowed through the tangle of weeds back to the road.

URGES STUDENTS INTO MINNESOTA WHEAT FIELDS

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 16.—Transportation of thousands of men to harvest the Northwest's bumper crops is looming up as a serious problem to the farmers of the Northwest states. In Canada, the situation was relieved by railroads offering free transportation. The anti-pass law and the fact that men laborers were concentrated in the cities during the spring, because there was little railroad repair work done through country districts, added to the difficulties of farmers.

Corn was slightly damaged by the recent rains, but other than that crop there has been a universal improvement in the Northwest crops, over last year's condition. Wheat is in prime condition, and will begin to move about Sept. 1. Flax, in fair condition, is beginning to move today. Dean Woods of the Minnesota agricultural school, urges that at least two-thirds of the college students go to the harvest fields this year.

ONE WOMAN'S IDEAS REGARDING THE FAIR

FAVORS ELIMINATION OF PROFESSIONAL EXHIBITORS IN DOMESTIC DEPARTMENT.

SUGGESTS BABY SHOW

Believes That a Showing of Articles Necessary for Nursery Would Be a Big Attraction for Mothers.

By Mrs. Abbie Helms.
Now that the storm and stress of fair week is over one may be pardoned for taking a little closer view of the event and pondering on its possibilities. In the first place it was a truly wonderful fair and the exhibits were especially fine in almost every department. And the men who had it in charge, the business men of the city and the farmers who were superintendents of the various classes, who gave practically all of their time and attention during the week to this enterprise, are certainly to be praised for their unflinching efforts.
But while we are thinking of the good features and the fine display of this year, we can at the same time be planning wherein it may be bettered in the future. And that is what I would so much like to suggest that a woman be appointed to act as general superintendent of the whole line of domestic and women's work. A whole souled, up-to-date farmer's wife, or even a commission of three of them could work up a lot of interest among their neighbors and friends and make the line much more popular and helpful with the common housekeeper than it is at present. What we want to make is a fair which can take in the work of everybody, not that of simply experts and professionals. And the present system of having representative farmers to take charge of the different classes of stock and agriculture is working out splendidly. And there is no reason why the same idea may not be followed out in relation to the work that women are interested in.

And in this connection it is to be hoped that the fair directors may hit upon some plan to bar out the professional exhibitor for another year. We mean those persons who come here with a box or trunkful of fancy work, gotten together with the special idea of taking prizes, and who make a tour of all the fairs with that special idea in view. The local talent in that line, who only make a piece of fancy work now and then for their own amusement can hardly compete with this traveling combination. And it is certainly not fair to the townspeople who support the fair to allow this kind of competition. One day we know of came with such an outfit from a nearby town outside the county. She came before the fair opened and did not even pay admission. She came to pay an admission fee and stay a half day. And yet the said party walks off with a majority of the first prizes. In defense of this custom it has been said that they bring a fine exhibit and help out in the show.

But if you examine the class of work shown, it will be seen that there is a superabundance in that line without them. In some classes there are fifty entries, in others sixty-five, and so it goes in all that kind of work. And local makers of fancy work will soon discover the reason that they can not win prizes for their work and will refuse to take the trouble to get together and exhibit to compete with such professionals.

This idea there is another side to this also and that is that these people are unknown here, and whether they make their work or buy it for the purpose of exhibition cannot be ascertained. So we feel certain that another year some means will be found to keep out such undesirable competitors.

But there is another thing that we would like to suggest in connection with the fair exhibits, and that is in regard to children. You know that it is the women and children who make up a home and we ought to take as much pleasure in caring for the children as we do for the pigs and calves. Wouldn't it be fine if we had one corner of the domestic science building set apart for the babies and children? That is with an exhibit of things pertaining to their comfort and welfare. A model outfit of baby clothes, an exhibit of baby cabs, cribs and jumpers; model toys for children, samples of patent baby foods. Even an exhibit of photographs of happy babies. And really with the plan devised for such affairs it is not nearly as formidable as it seems. The exhibit from the children of the schools is really very praiseworthy and the effort made by the fair management to interest the children will undoubtedly be most helpful to them, and will another year bring greater results. In behalf of the women and children let me thank the fair management for the cool and comfortable rest room so thoughtfully provided by them for that purpose, and say that it was fully appreciated by the public.

Again I say it was a great fair. May we have many more like it.

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED BY FRENCH AIRMEN

Have Destroyed 36 Hostile Aeroplanes in Addition to Bombarding Important Positions of Enemy.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Paris, Aug. 16.—During the first year, so far as accounts have been rendered to the public, 36 German flying machines, not including dirigible balloons, were brought to earth and destroyed by French airmen. The day he was obliged to alight behind the German lines and was taken prisoner, Roland Garros, the well known civilian aviator, held the record with three machines to his credit. He has since been surpassed by Lieutenant E. G., who has brought down four.

Garros used a special armament planned by himself with a machine gun regulated to fire across the axis of the propeller. In the first three days this machine he brought down three victims.

What a single airman is able to accomplish against land forces is indicated by the case of Adjutant Y. reported by Jacques Mortaine, sporting writer and a volunteer in the aviation corps, as having in a single day dropped 22 3/4-inch shells and 8,000 steel darts upon batteries and mortars that he destroyed at Norroy, 8 shells and 4,000 darts on the general headquarters at Thiaucourt, 4 shells and 2,000 darts at Pagny-sur-Moselle, 4 shells and 2,000 darts at Charny—a total of 32 shells and 18,000 darts.

It is generally impossible for the airman to know exactly what damage he has done, except in the case where bombs cause conflagrations. The results of some bombardments have become known. At the headquarters of the German Crown Prince at Rivigny, October 22, 15 men were killed and 36 horses and 22 men wounded. The men were mostly officers. At the general headquarters of Emperor William, November 1, two of the Emperor's aides-de-camp were killed. In the destruction of a military train at Zebruges, the Prince of Wurtemberg, General Garreinerich and two lieutenant generals were killed. On May 31, the airman killed 20 officers and wounded 30 at the German aerodrome at Gonnar.

Official details have been given of over 100 air attacks upon German camps, aerodromes, railway communications, etc., but they are only a part of what the attacking flying corps has done; it often happens that the raider does not come back to render account. How many French planes have been brought to earth is impossible to state. The French give out no figures of their losses. A number of accidents are known, however, among them some that give a vivid impression of the danger of flying. Bombarding section of the flying corps. Captain D. was about to take the air for a raid, and the machine-run man with him, was preparing a shell of 1800 yards, when he awkwardly let it fall upon the frame. The shock exploded the projectile and blew the apparatus and men to pieces.

A similar accident occurred to the English aviator, Captain C. While he was taking aboard his supply of ammunition, a bomb fell to the ground, exploded, destroyed the machine; the pilot and 12 machinists who were standing by.

M. P., caught in the clouds on a severely cold day, came out at a height of 1,200 yards, so benumbed that he lost control of his machine and fell to his death.

Lieutenant N. was reconnoitering with an observer whose scarf became unwound in the wind, caught in the propeller, precipitating the machine to the ground.

NATIONAL DEFENSE WILL BE DISCUSSED AT GOVERNORS' MEET

State Executives Will Consider Ways and Means of Improving Citizen Soldier.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—Thirty-six governors of many states will meet in Boston, Aug. 24, 25, 26 and 27, to attend the annual session of the Governors' Conference, where they will hear and participate in the discussion of the states can do to improve the national defense, according to an announcement by Secretary M. C. Riley, Secretary of the Conference.

"While the times and conditions have forced upon the states the attention of the entire world, no governor, so far as I have heard, fears that the present world war will force the United States to adopt a policy of militarism," said Secretary Riley. "However, all the governors feel that it is time that immediate steps be taken to develop a stronger and more efficient citizen-soldier. For this reason, the Relation of the State to the National Defense has been given a prominent place on the program.

"Notwithstanding all this, other important subjects will be considered. In many states there has grown up in recent years a well defined movement to concentrate in the executive responsibility for efficient service and economical administration. Many governors will go to Boston this year expecting to benefit it in a large way from an exchange of experience with executives of other states. This is an off-year so that the meeting of legislatures are concerned. The sessions of the legislatures of the various states have closed. The attention of the governors for the next year will be centered upon the problems of administration. Therefore, prominent place has been given to administrative problems on the Conference program. Under this head the following subjects will be presented and discussed: 'The Short Ballot,' 'The Functions of the Governor in Relation to the State Budget,' and 'Economy and Efficiency in the State.'

"Governors William of New York, Alexander of Idaho, Hammond of Minnesota, Willis of Ohio, Major of Missouri, Spaulding of New Hampshire, and Byrne of South Dakota will present these papers and lead the discussions to follow.

"Governors of the western states will present their conception of what is true conservation of natural resources. Many of them have been direct issue with the federal policy of retaining under federal control lands and mines, and water power sites. These governors insist that substantial and satisfactory progress in the development of the west can not be expected under the federal policy and that true progress can only be made by allowing the western states to deal with these problems according to their judgment which is based upon a more intimate knowledge of the situation.

Governors Carlson of Colorado, Spry of Utah, Boyle of Nevada and former Governors Ammons of Colorado and Hawley of Idaho will present the cause of the western people."

STATE HOTEL MEN MEET IN LACROSSE AT YEARLY CONVENTION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 16.—Schools of accounting for hotel employees are a possibility in Wisconsin. Hotel men from all over the state gathered here today for the nineteenth annual convention and among the projects to be discussed was that of establishing schools for the training of hotel accountants.

The hotel business has grown into a complicated affair, especially for those hoteliers in cities where every night enough people are housed to populate a good sized town. The proper entertainment of such large numbers of guests will also be taken up.

Roger Bourke of Chicago delivered an address today on 'Schools of accounting for hotel employees,' showing the benefits to be derived from training competent men to look after the finances and checking system of hotels.

Ray Smith, president of the association, responded to the address of welcome delivered by Mayor A. A. Bentley today. This formality inaugurated a two-day program of business discussions and entertainment.

The visiting women are scheduled for a continual round of gaiety.

The entire membership of the Wisconsin association expects to leave here Wednesday night for Davenport, Ia., where the Northwestern Hotel Men's association opens its annual session.

CARDINALS TROUNCE U. S. ARMY TEAM 3-0

MASTER SOLDIER TEAM IN EXCITING GAME AT FAIR GROUNDS SUNDAY.

BOB FUCIK DOES TRICK

Madison "Zip" Boy Allows But Six Hits and Hits a Long Triple for the First Run in Game.

Janesville was invaded Sunday by the pick of the United States Army team, some of whom were soldiers and some of whom were not, and after an exciting tilt on the diamond, the Cardinals crumbled the army's line of defense for three runs and whitewashed them. Bob Fucik was at the head of a real 42-centimeter run and he plugged holes in the army so fast that they looked real mere and peaceful when the game was over, for Bob was not good friends with the soldiers during the matinee. Consequently he served the best speed ball he had and just as close to them as safety would allow.

It has been some time since the Cardinals had a better lineup than yesterday and not in recent years has a better team represented the city. Not an error did the Cards make and they sure had plenty of chances to make them had they felt that way. The support aided Fucik greatly and hardly a dozen times during the game did the big "zip" boy shoot his famed curves, but rather mixed up the fast ones with his double delivery, putting them so close together that they were hard to hit. Before the game had got under way there was quite a little feeling existing between the players and before the game progressed to a scoring point both sides were crabbing and rag chieving among themselves with plenty of pep and ginger. The Cardinals did not relish "army mule" tactics that the soldiers were employing and the remarks of their coaches. The army lads were fighting to the last ditch, but the Cardinals had too much ammunition for them and chased them out of their benches and had them running in circles trying to catch up with the score.

"Soldier" Croak Pitches. With the game nicely started the Cardinals were pleasantly surprised to learn that Croak, who pitched here with Rock Island, was going to south-paw for the Army. He was greeted with a welcome of hits and three of the Cardinals busted his left handed slow shots for extra bases. The Cardinals put runners on the sacks in both the first and second, but not until the third did they make a noise like a run.

In the third Fucik, first up, received a big hand and loaded up the war club with energy, which he used to punch a long triple, "Home Run" Curtis made good with a single and Bob walked home. Kerner laid down a neat sacrifice but the next two batters, Blake and Nelson, could not locate a safe place to hit the ball. Blake laid down a grounder to short, and Fredericks scooped the flying ball, juggled a minute, and caught the runner at first with no ease. It was in the fifth inning when the Army obtained their first safe hit, and this rare fact was followed by a tumultuous amount of coaching that caused the Cardinals' Wolfe, their catcher, doubled for a starter, but he never moved from second, as the Cards' infield kept him there while making the outs. In the sixth the Cardinals went out and added one, when Lampert lambasted a double, his second, and was put to third by Rasmussen on a sacrifice. Ryan hit scoring Lampert, and then was forced out at second. Fucik came to bat with one on, but much to the surprise of even the Army pitcher he fanned for once in his life.

In the seventh "Denny" Blake made fools out of the Army infield and came near putting another tally across. Curtis singled, but was forced at second by Kerner who beat out the throw for a double play. Kerner stole second, this time hanging to the sack and not oversliding as in the third inning. Blake lined a hot grounder down third, and Mathewson batted the ball over his shoulder, allowing Kerner to score. Blake pulled the delayed steal on the Army catcher and went to third with the Army infield holding the ball by the same means. Lampert drove one down to first and Brown, the Army sacker, saved the colors by picking off a one-hand stab for the third out.

Everything was quiet for the Army until the ninth, and as usual the Cardinals were a little shaky with the game safely locked up in Fucik's ice box. With one down Dunlap singled and Rasmussen caught the next batter on a foul. Newman and Smiley followed with singles that clogged the sacks. The soldiers were pulling for a rally around the flag but Croak lined out a drive to Curtis, who speared the ball as the tying runs were floating around the sacks. Summary:

Earned runs—Cardinals 2.
Three base hit—Fucik.
First on base—Off Fucik 2, Croak 0.
Left on bases—Cards 10, Army 8.
Stolen bases—Blake 2, Kerner, Smith.
Sacrifice hits—Curtis, Kerner, Rasmussen.
Two base hits—Ryan, Lampert 2, Kerner and Wolds.

Struck out—By Fucik 3, Croak 4. Hit by pitcher—Croak. Umpire—Mullen of Chicago. Attendance—1,145. Time—1 hr. 45 min.

Between Innings. When Ump Mullen called Smith out at home in the third the Army nine mobilized around him and ruthless language was exchanged and it looked as if the Army lads had the right to kick. Curtis lined the throw home high and Rasmussen had to throw himself at the runner to tag him. When peace was declared the soldiers carried an ugly grudge and tried to take it out on Fucik.

Ryan had a good day, got two hits, one a double, and accepted two chances without a boot. Nelson is a hard fighter up on his toes, and has got nerves of steel. Besides these assets he has a most excellent vocabulary of terms to use in time of need.

Next Sunday the crack Mount Morris team play here. They are coming to Janesville to receive their first defeat, for they have been unbeaten all season. Bob Fucik will be against them, so it is almost assured fact that they will not finish without a defeat here. The diamond was in good shape despite the after effects of the fair.

The keels are now sold at the outside gates instead of the grand stand. Ryan and Blake run Newman "ragged" at second in the fifth by dashing at the sacks at the same time. Rasmussen picked off a nice foul. Newman in the fifth back to the fence. He fell down after catching the ball, but threw to Kerner to stop Dunlap from going to third.

What was the star of the day, getting six chances and two hits, a stolen base and a sacrifice. We hope he is in good form for the Beloit series.

The visitors were sure "soldiering" on their jobs in the seventh when Blake pulled off those two steals.

MORRIS MILLER

Coveleskie, the Tigers' successful south-paw, is one of the few pitchers who, after being declared unfit for major league company, has come back after a day in the minors and made good. Coveleskie has been Janesville's most successful pitcher since he has been a member of the Detroit team, and yet it was only a few years ago when all major league teams waived on him and allowed him to go back to the Southern Association. Coveleskie now is a better pitcher than he was during the period he was with the Phillies, whose team he helped win the pennant by beating the Giants in several games and preventing them from winning the pennant, he earned the nickname of "Giant Killer."

Jim Thorpe, who is playing good ball for Jersey City, is rapidly learning how to hit curve pitching. He probably will go back to the Giants in the fall.

A portion of the press in Philadelphia is assailing Connie Mack because of the poor grade of base ball which the Cardinals are turning out. The press is being made to further discourage the fans who already are little in evidence at Shibe Park. But Mack is not trying to land any place in this campaign. He is simply playing in the hope of having a strong team in the field in the next campaign, and while it cannot be expected that a lot of fans will attend these games, Mack is not entitled to any criticism, for he is doing exactly what any other manager would do.

President Gaffney of the Braves says that Bill James, who is piling up a skimpy lot of wins this season, is working his head off to get into condition.

Federal league players are worrying over the new threats that the Feds intend to make another raid on the major leagues. Many of the Fed players have the ten-day release clause in their contracts and the go-go-sips insist that if the proposed raids land a number of high-salaried stars room will be made for them by releasing other Fed players, who will be compelled to accept very salaries or remain idle. The federal league promoters claim that their proposed raid, if successful, will force organized baseball clubs to increase their pay rolls, thereby running the risk of going into bankruptcy.

Canadian canoeists on September 2 will start on a 200-mile canoe race over the St. Lawrence and Rideau river route. The race will be from Prescott to Kingston, through the Rideau lakes. The race is an open one, the only conditions being that boats shall not be racing canoes. Each must contain only two men, both of whom shall be amateurs.

The Elgin road race on October 9 will be the next big attraction in the automobile speed world. Officials are trying to secure the entry of Dario Resta, winner of the 1000-mile race at Chicago recently. He's been in the money in every race he has entered in this country. Resta's wife is a sister of Spencer Wishart, killed at Elgin, and because of this the speedy pilot is not expected to enter. Joe

THORPE DECLARES HE'LL BE BACK IN THE BIG LEAGUES

Jim Thorpe.

Although Jim Thorpe, the Carlisle Indian, seems to be having his troubles, he declares that he will yet land back in the big leagues. Jim couldn't make good with the Giants and was farmed out to the Jersey City club. The "Skeeters" didn't want him and sent him to the Harrisburg club, where he will be given another chance to prove his worth.

Cooper, killed Saturday in a race at Des Moines, was entered in the Elgin race.

Roger Bresnahan, Cub manager and veteran catcher, used to be quite a pitcher and also some third baseman. William Vos, Cleveland printer, who played against him around Muskegon, Michigan, eighteen years ago, says that one day when Roger was playing a star game at third for Manistee against Muskegon, a Muskegon rooster yelled, "What would you do for a third baseman if Bres was pitching?" A Manistee player yelled back, "We wouldn't need a third baseman."

John McGraw repeats what he said in the spring, that the Braves and Giants will be the clubs at the top in October. John is taking a different line this year, for last summer he was sure at all times that the Braves would crack. He now says that the Giants of other days would have been framing up their signals for the world's series by now, but that the Giants of today have been as bad as the rest of the clubs. The Giants' batting punch is now well developed and it's up to their pitchers.

One Insertion of Adv., Located the Owner.

A tourist found an automobile tail light and license plate just outside of Janesville. He knew someone would be mighty anxious to recover it and he also knew the best way of finding the owner. He brought it to the Gazette office and advertised it as found. Al Chilson lost it and before he could place a lost adv. in the Gazette for it after he noticed the loss, the Gazette reached him containing the "Found" adv. Naturally it did not take another insertion for Mr. Chilson to call and claim his own. The daily newspaper is an exchange of information. You lose something and someone else finds it. By means of the newspaper the article is recovered. You have something to sell and some other person needs it. When advertised both parties are brought together.

A Very Good Suggestion.

A Young Men's Christian association suggests that the man who must drink have his wife buy a supply and retail the stuff to him. It adds: "Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her and then die, with snakes in your boots, she will have money enough to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, marry a decent man and quit thinking about you entirely."

LEGAL NOTICES

ORDINANCE NO. 29.

An Ordinance prohibiting the erection and requiring the removal of telephone, telegraph, and electric light and power poles, from certain streets in the City of Janesville, Wis.

The Mayor and Council do ordain as follows:

Section 1. No poles for the purpose of carrying telegraph, telephone, or electric light or power wires or other telegraph, telegraph, or electric light or power appliances, shall hereafter be erected within or upon the following named streets in the City of Janesville, to-wit: Milwaukee Street, between Division Street and Academy Street; Main Street, between Prospect Avenue and St. Lawrence Avenue; River Street, between Milwaukee Street and Pleasant Street; and Academy Street, between Milwaukee Street and the north side of Wall Street.

Section 2. All poles of the character mentioned in section one hereof, now standing upon the streets herein named, shall be removed therefrom on or before the first day of May, 1916. Said streets are as follows: Milwaukee Street, between Division Street and Academy Street; Main Street, between Prospect Avenue and St. Lawrence Avenue; River Street, between Milwaukee Street and Pleasant Street; and Academy Street, between Milwaukee Street and the north side of Wall Street.

Section 3. Any pole permitted to remain standing in violation of the terms of this ordinance is hereby declared to be a public nuisance and may be summarily removed by order of the Council of said City.

Section 4. Not of the limitations of this ordinance shall apply to any ornamental street lighting system adopted by the Council for the purpose of Municipal lighting.

Section 5. Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25.00 or more than $100.00 and each day's violation shall constitute a separate offense.

Section 6. This ordinance shall be in force and take effect from and after ten days following its passage and upon its publication, which said publication shall be for three successive days, during said interim of ten days. Adopted by the Mayor and Council of the City of Janesville, this 10th day of August, 1915.

JAS. A. FATHERS, Mayor.

R. M. CUMMINGS, Councilman.

P. J. GOODMAN, Councilman.

Attest: J. P. HAMMARLUND, City Clerk.

Customer—I bought a ham here a week ago and it was fine. Have you any more of them?

Butcher—Yes, ma'am. There are a few of those hams up there now. Customer—Well if you're sure they are off the same pig, I'll take two of them.

Cost of a Submarine

Although actual figures, for obvious reasons, are not available, one would be underestimating, rather than overestimating the cost of the German submarine U-29, which the British admiralty reports to have been sunk, at $200,000. This total is based on the fact that, according to a certain official publication, the B-4 of our submarine fleet, which was completed in 1913, cost $107,791; and the E class is neither the largest nor the most expensive type of submarine in the fleet today.

According to the admiralty statement, the cost of the "hull, fittings and equipment" of the E-4 was $228,787, $79,105 being spent on her propulsion and other machinery. In addition to this outlay there was an item, of $1,899 for "incidental charges," which relate to the proportionate costs incurred while the vessel was in the hands of the dockyard authorities being finished off—London Times.

Explosive Needles.

The present war has been responsible for various inventions to slay mankind, and the French war office has now in operation an invention for combating Zeppelins.

The new weapon consists of a long needle carrying a small shell. These needles are very light, and so is the shell they carry. When the needle pierces cloth or any light substance—and not till then—it explodes the shell. If fired against a brick wall it is harmless.

The needles are so small that a quantity can be carried on an aeroplane. They can also be fired from a very light gun, and when once they strike a Zeppelin and explode they will also explode the gas contained in the envelope, and so destroy the whole machine.
